Identifying Irony 5

Directions: Read the following examples of irony. Determine which of the three types of irony are being used and then explain your answer.

Dramatic irony – This occurs when the reader or audience understands more about the events of a story than a character.

Situational irony – This occurs when what actually happens is the opposite of what is expected or appropriate.

Verbal irony – A character says one thing but really means the opposite.

1. Amy was so excited about the Christmas dance that she couldn't concentrate on anything else. The whole week leading up to it, she drew doodles of herself wearing her dress and a sparkling tiara instead of taking notes. The night before the dance, she noticed that she was getting a small pimple on her nose. It was just a tiny little mark, but she imagined herself with a great big pimple, looking like Rudolph the Reindeer in all of the photos, and grew gravely concerned. She ran out to the store and bought a tube of every kind of pimple fighting cream available and then applied large globs of each of them to her nose. She went to bed satisfied that she had done all that she could to fight the blemish. When she woke up, she ran to mirror hoping that the pimple had vanished. As she gazed upon herself in the mirror, she screamed, not because the pimple had vanished, but because a bright red rash covered her entire nose.

Explain your answer:

2. Max hated Brussels sprouts, but his Dad always made him eat them. One night an idea came to Max that would allow him to escape this cruel fate: he would feed the Brussels sprouts to his dog. This seemed to go well enough at first, as the dog hungrily consumed the sprouts. His dad even congratulated him on eating them all. "Normally it's a pain to get you to eat those, Max," He said. "I'm glad that you stepped it up." Max basked in his father's approval and felt quite clever. Then his dog let out a yelp. Max grew concerned. The dog was walking in a circle and hacking. His Dad asked, "What's wrong, Boy?" Max attempted to distract his father as he tended to the dog, "He probably just needs some space, Dad." Max's father looked at him curiously, right as the dog vomited a stream of Brussels sprouts.

3. Axel was the toughest kid on the playground. He wore a leather jacket with cutoff sleeves and metal studs on the shoulders. He had a Mohawk hairstyle, listened to punk rock music, and hung out with the older kids. He rode his skateboard to school and did noseslides on the bike rack. He whooped on anyone who challenged him, but after a long day of being really tough, Axel's mommy tucked him into bed at night and he snuggled up tightly with a fluffy pink bear that he called Mr. Tickles.

Explain your answer:

4. It was the ninth inning and Bryant's team was down by two. There was a man on first and second and Bryant was up to bat. If he could get a good hit, he could tie the game and maybe even win it. He stared the pitcher in the eye with a cold steel gaze as the ball floated from his hand. Everything seemed to move in slow motion as Bryant twirled awkwardly, swinging the bat and somehow hitting the ball with the bottom of the handle. From the sheer force of the blow, the ball bounced a few feet from Bryant and landed directly in the third baseman's mitt, causing a force out. The third baseman tossed it to second, who rounded it out to first, and Bryant was responsible for a triple play. As the players lined up to exchange handshakes at the end of the game, the pitcher stared coolly at Bryant. They shook hands, and the pitcher said, "Nice hit, Champ. Way to get a hold of it." Bryant had never felt more embarrassed.

5. The two men crawled across the sun scorched sand. The wind blew the sand grains into their faces at blinding speeds as they reached their way over the sand dune. The man in back asked the other man to stop, but his throat was so dry that the word sounded more like "top" so the man continued. As they reached the top of the dune, they looked over and saw a glistening pool some thirty yards down the hill. It wasn't a large pool, but it shimmered in the sun and beckoned the dehydrated men, urging them to continue their struggle. Summoning the will to live and using it as strength, the men pushed forward until the tiny pool was in reach. The man in front desperately scooped a handful of the shiny liquid from the precious water source and threw it into his mouth, where upon he began coughing and spitting out the water. The man behind him seemed confused, until the man in front said, "This is salt water..."

6. Cassie was unhappy in her relationship with Richard. There wasn't anything that was wrong with him. He did cut her off occasionally while she was trying to speak, but overall he was a good guy. She just wanted something different. She decided that tonight she would break up with Richard tonight. As soon as Richard arrived at her house, she wanted to sit him down and talk to him about it, but he rushed her out the door. "No time to talk now, Babe," he said. "We're late for our dinner reservations." So she figured that she would tell him at the restaurant, near the end of the meal. She would even offer to pay. So they a delicious meal and right before dessert, Cassie opened her mouth to let out the words that would be fatal to their relationship, "Richard..." she began, but Richard broke in, "Oh, Babe, I got a surprise for you." He pulled a small white envelope from his pocket and produced two tickets from it. "Two front row tickets to see your favorite band, The Mountain boys!" Cassie's mouth dropped. Richard backpedaled, "I'm sorry that I cut you off again. What was it that you wanted to tell me?" Cassie looked down at the piece of cake in front of her and replied, "Oh, I forget. Nothing important."
